The Great Bulwer-Lytton Debate, set for August 30, 1:00 p.m. in Lytton, has garnered international headlines. The announcement of the literary slugfest between "the Toff and the Proff" resulted in Mayor O’Connor being interviewed by CBC radio’s “As It Happens” program, which is broadcast internationally via satellite and shortwave. A press release on the NPTGS-organized event was picked up by Canadian Press Vancouver and has run on CTV’s all-news channel and been printed across the country in newspapers like the Province (Sickie Glover, The Toronto Star) and on the Toronto Sun’s Canoe news service.

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.

Kevin Blacklaws

The debate between Cobbold-Lytton, heir to the barony of Cobbold, and Professor Rice will be refereed by popular Global TV Journalist Mike McArdell. Although billed as “a no-holds barred literary slamfest,” it’s obvious the two combatants have their tongues firmly planted in their cheeks.

“I am very pleased for the opportunity to defend Bulwer Lytton’s literary reputation in debate with Professor (Scott) Rice, whose scurrilous Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest cannot even spell the great man’s name correctly,” said Cobbold-Lytton. For his part, Rice isn’t afraid to take the gloves off to defend his name correctly,” said Cobbald-Lytton.